IAHR shortlisting panels pay close attention to the nomination criteria and their decisions are solely based on the evidence provided in submitted nominations.

Check your nominee's eligibility

Make sure you pay attention to the eligibility criteria and adjust your nomination accordingly.

Quality over quantity

The quality of nominations is the most important consideration for the shortlisting panel.

Biographical data

Please list some pertinent biographical data (for individuals and organisations where applicable) or attach resume.

Qualifications

Please include a concise statement of the qualifications of the nominee.

Achievements

Please make a summary of his/her/its main contributions to hydro-environment engineering and science. The following are the merits to take into consideration:

- a. Publications. List and number of books or monographs (as main author or chapter contributor), list and number of peer-reviewed papers (journals and conferences), list and number of technical reports, other publications (magazines, etc.).
- b. Recognitions. Awards, recognitions, and biographical citations.
- c. Visiting positions and invited speeches.
- d. Research outreach. Seminars, educational programmes, presentations, etc.
- e. Service to IAHR. Leadership positions, reviewer or editor of IAHR journals, organisation of conferences/symposiums, etc.
- f. Impact. Contributions of seminal importance in research, extraordinary contributions to academic programmes, etc.

Statement

Please write a brief statement describing the endeavours for which the nominated awardee should be recognised. Please be specific. Remember that general statements tend to lack the detail needed for shortlisting. Ideally, aim to reference the specific impact the nominee has had with respect to the selection criteria.
